2023 Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Report

Diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) is a cornerstone of Sprout Social's culture, informing the way we structure our business, build our product and support our employees.

In our 2023 DEI report, we share the milestones we've reached as a company and our team's demographic information, while reflecting on our journey and progress to date.

Since our last report, we expanded upon our existing DEI infrastructure and focused our efforts on identifying the greatest catalysts for change—which were to increase investments in our leaders, diversify our recruiting pipeline and cultivate community and connection within our team.

We know our leaders set the example for how we approach work, collaboration and connection with each other.

To further drive the ownership of DEI across the organization, we introduced a new leadership development program to reinforce expected behaviors, such as empathetic and compassionate leadership, inclusive leadership, leading in times of crisis and mitigating unconscious bias in decision making.

We also enhanced our DEI learning programs to drive awareness and action in the areas of cultural agility, identity, power and privilege, allyship, and more.

With a refined leadership model in place, we set our sights on improving our strategies to hire, retain and develop historically underrepresented talent.

We diversified our recruiting pipeline through strategic partnerships and initiatives, including a scholarship fund with the United Negro College Fund and partnering with re:Work Training to hire and develop diverse talent into our Revenue teams.

Our ability to retain diverse talent is dependent on the support and resources we provide to ensure equitable growth and development. Therefore, we created a new leadership program for US-based BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, people of color) employees that provides professional development courses, leadership and peer coaching, and networking opportunities.

Our efforts to hire and retain diverse talent ladder up to a critical element of our DEI work—to create an environment that fosters community and connection.

The launch of our ten Community Resource Groups (CRGs), formerly known as Business Resource Groups, help serve and support members of historically underrepresented identities and broader communities, and over the last year we added Veterans@Sprout and Interfaith@Sprout to the program.

These groups are fundamental to providing space for people to connect, celebrate, and find belonging in the workplace. We've strengthened our CRG structure so that leaders of each group have access to professional development opportunities and receive an awarded annual bonus for their contributions.

The investments we made to support and grow our team led to productive conversations about how DEI influences what we make and who we make it for.

We've made several updates to Sprout's app to support inclusive social media best practices, such as alerts for adding image alt text to posts with visual content, as well as partnering with accessibility vendors to routinely audit the usability of our app. These adjustments have resulted in more equitable experiences for our customers and team.

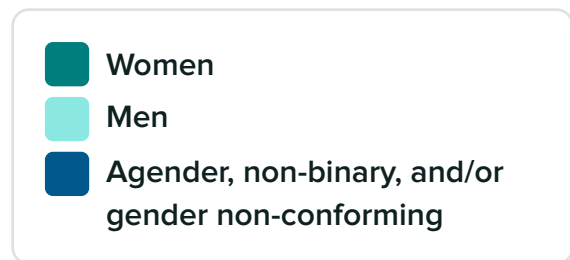

An immeasurable amount of time, effort and care is required to move the needle on DEI, and we are proud to see our progress reflected in our team's data, shared below.

As we look ahead to 2023, we will continue to build on the great momentum from last year and double down on the structures that enable us to be stewards of our workforce diversity with a focus on team-wide learning, ensuring equity in our critical people processes, and furthering our efforts to create a sense of inclusion and belonging for us all.

Data appendix / methodology

The data included in this report is derived from employees' self-reported identities in Workday, Sprout Social's HR Information System, as of December 31, 2022. Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole and may not add up to exactly 100%. Employees may opt out of providing self-reported identities.

This past year, we refined our data collection process to ensure we're referencing a single data source in order to maintain the integrity and accuracy of our team's demographic makeup. Past reports have included additional data from multiple sources (e.g. anonymous survey data), which results in some variance in the demographics shared—as a result, we will not be sharing sexual orientation data this year.

Additionally, we adjusted our approach to collecting gender self-identification to include non-binary, gender non-conforming, and/or agender identities. As a result, gender percentages may look different than in past reports.
